47. 5 B DOCTOR: But that's the worst thing he
a/b could possibly do. /
48. 2 B REBEC: But Codal said if we destroyed
a/h the refrigeration unit we'd be destroying the Daleks. /
49. 5 B DOCTOR: On the contrary, you'd be
CU LATEP bringing their army to life. /
50. 4 A LATEP: How Doctor? /
2s. DOCTOR/JO
- JO: The Daleks you saw in that arsenal are in a sort of suspended animation.
51. 5 B DOCTOR: Exactly. No ageing process.
2s. LATEP/REBEC No degeneration. An army of Daleks in cold storage till its needed! /
52. 4 A REBEC: So that's why they built the
2s. a/b refrigeration unit. /
- JO: They need a constant controllable
low temperature. And the ice volcano's too unstable.
- DOCTOR: The minute the temperature
rises theose Daleks will be on the move..
We've got to find the others and stop them ...

This is one of the natural ice pools of the planet, a spring, fed from the ice core of spiridon.

Set amongst the boulders it's glistening surface bubbles slowly and gives off a gentle haze of steam.

DOCTOR WHO and TARON appear around one of the rocks and move to stand at it's edge.

DOCTOR WHO: I noticed this this morning. Have you seen them before?

TARON: Mmmm. They're all over the place. Molten ice pools...They're sort of natural springs...

DOCTOR WHO stoops and gathers a handful of the molten ice.

DOCTOR WHO: And hyper-cold...

He shakes the ice off his hand and blows on his fingers.

DOCTOR WHO: It's an odd phenomena of water on this planet that it sustains sub zero temperatures but remains semi-liquid.

TARON: I'm sorry...I don't see the significance of all this...We've known about these ice pools for some time...

DOCTOR WHO: The Daleks are vunerable to extremely low temperatures...They are hardly able to function at all at sub-zero levels...Now do you see?

It takes TARON a few seconds,
but finally his face reflects
that the idea has penetrated.
He starts to grin.

TARON: Yes. Yes I do see...

Then very business like:

TARON: Come on...let's look around and find a way to make it work...

DOCTOR WHO looks rather pleased with himself.

DOCTOR WHO: It's a good feeling isn't it? When the hunted become the hunters.

TELECINE 4.

Ext. Ice pool. Section Day.

DALEK ONE swings around violently, and in so doing hurls TARON off. It levels to fire at TARON, with every ounce of his strength the DOCTOR heaves the DALEK backwards and it tilts onto its side in the ice pool and half submerges.

TARON has only just got to his feet when DALEK TWO appears around the rock, propelled by the others. DOCTOR WHO and TARON have no need to assist as the four propel it at great speed into the tpool. PATEL leaps from its back at the last instant.

THE GROUP are widely excited by their victory. PATEL grabs JO and they embrace.

DOCTOR WHO calms his own excitement and brings them back to order.

DOCTOR WHO: Well done. Well done all of you... But we've still got work to do... Taron.

TARON now takes charge. He presses the switch on his belt.

TARON: Patel...switch on your thermal liner....

PATEL does, then TARON leads the way and both men wade into the ice pool.

As the TWO MEN wade toward them, DOCTOR WHO calls instructions.
